Horrible Diseases

How many thousands of persons both male and female are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! It is all important to those who are afflicted or those who are interested in the welfare of their friends to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest the cities publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice or depraved sexual indulgence, practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, the sufferer should apply immediately either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

Mr Tilton's Counsel on his Client's Case

NEW YORK, August 6—Judge Morris, counsel for Tilton, said to-day that he had never seen a case so strongly fortified at all points as that of his client. He exhibited to reporters several letters which passed between Beecher and Tilton to show that down to May, 1870, there was no vindictiveness on the part of Tilton toward Beecher. Morris also showed a receipt of Wm. Page, dated February 2, [illegible] for a portrait of Beecher purchased by Tilton and now hanging in Moulton's house, saying that in the following year (1870), after Mrs. Tilton had informed her mother of her guilty relations with Beecher, her mother [illegible] tried to cut the canvas into slits, and Tilton, unwilling to see a work of art destroyed, removed it to Moulton's, where it still remains. Morris [illegible] said that Mrs. Tilton's statements [illegible] [illegible] and Tilton [illegible] [illegible] his wife.

It is reported that Moulton's statement is already prepared with the help of Gen. Butler. [illegible] the latter gentleman, it is said, have been offered to Beecher. The offer was not [illegible] but was rejected with thanks.

Moulton Speaks.

Moulton said to-day that he had not said anything to any one or given to justify any one in assuming that he was in the least degree unfriendly to Beecher. In his statement to the Committee he should characterize no actions and interpolate no interpretations of his own. There were some papers in his possession which the Committee desire to obtain. He should gratify that desire according to the order in which they came to him, leaving the Committee and the public to make their own inferences. He had thus far endeavored to maintain peace between Beecher and Tilton and should continue to do [illegible] by a [illegible] of unsought [illegible] and [illegible] intelligent realization of self-interest. He should never despair of renewing peace.

HOW A GAME OF POKER ENDED

A QUARREL ORIGINATING AT THE UNITED STATES HOTEL, LONG BRANCH, TERMINATING IN EAST FIFTY-EIGHTH STREET

At the regular summer meeting of the Monmouth Park Association at Long Branch last week, Edward Hertz, a native of Vicksburg, Miss., made the acquaintance of Henry Livingstone, a resident of Yorkville. After the usual salutations and a discussion on horse-flesh, the conversation soon drifted as to who was the best poker player. LETTER FROM NORTHWEST

THE HARVEST AND THE HARVEST—THE OSWEGO IRON COMPANY'S WORKS—IN AND ABOUT THE VILLAGE—[illegible] NURSERIES, ETC. IN THE VICINITY OF OSWEGO.

OSWEGO, August 3, 1874.

The news comes from different quarters that the harvest for fall wheat is general this week in Willamette Valley; the weather so far is all that could be desired for that purpose. The prospect of an abundant crop safely secured and selling at prices that will pay the farmers an average remuneration for their labor are encouraging to those interested in the prosperity of the State.

THE OSWEGO IRON COMPANY

At the village of Oswego is an interesting place to visitors at present. The manufacture of iron at the Company's furnace is in full operation and the process of smelting is in successful working order. The buildings are extensive and complete, erected in a most substantial and durable manner and admirably located for procuring the ore, timber for making charcoal, and convenient shipping. The stack that encloses the furnace is a piece of as fine stone and brick work as ever was erected for a similar purpose. The furnace is brought to an intense heat by means of charcoal and a powerful blast of air forced through a pipe into the furnace from the condenser in the wind house by means of a high pressure, that acts on the principle of a pair of bellows. The furnace is charged twice an hour, each time with 20 bushels of charcoal, from 700 to 900 pounds of ore, and from 100 to 120 pounds of limestone. This is kept up day and night and all the days of the week. Every eight hours the melted ore is drawn off in moulds made in sand in the form of bars three feet long, making three castings in the twenty four hours. Each casting yields two and a half tons of iron bars, equal to about eight tons each day. In this department there are ten men employed, in two divisions of five each, at work twelve hours. It is warm work and requires unceasing attention, constant care and good judgment. There are six kinds of bar iron made at these works: Nos. 1 and 2 are soft grades of iron adapted for foundries; No. 3 and 4 are highly tempered for railroad car wheels, &c., and 5 and 6 are made very hard and highly tempered for various purposes. The iron is considered by competent judges to be the best on this coast and equal to any made in the United States.

The ore is got a mile from the furnace near the surface of the ground, and yields forty per cent of iron. It is hauled in wagons; the fine ore is screened to remove the dirt; the large hard lumps are roasted so as to make them easily broken before being put into the furnace, as well as to facilitate the smelting. The roasting process is similar to the mode of burning lime. Men are kept prospecting for ore all the time. The indications are that the district is intersected with numerous beds of ore. Charcoal is used in preference to coal, being free from sulphur, and limestone is used to remove any sulphur that may be in the ore. The limestone is shipped from San Juan Island in the Sound, because it can be brought from there cheaper than it can be by railroad from Roseburg in our own State. A large number of men are employed in burning, hauling and storing the charcoal. The works are under the efficient superintendence of Mr. C. L. Botsford. The Company have a good general store for supplying their men and the public, and a neat, comfortable office in the same building, under the charge of Mr. Brown and Mr. Cealey. We found all these gentlemen most obliging and willing to give any information required. In the various departments of the work—wood chopping, charcoal burning, mining, hauling, smelting and superintending—there are upwards of a hundred men employed. The whole establishment does credit to the Company who originally constructed the works at a cost of $125,000, to the enterprise of the present Company, who are likely to make it successful, and to the gentlemen in charge of the different departments.

There is little doubt but this company's works will in a reasonable time grow to large proportions and prove one of the valuable institutions of the State. They are already supplying the Oregon Stove Manufacturing Company in East Portland with their iron, which company are making arrangements to supply the wants of the State with stoves of a superior quality, that will save $100,000 from leaving Oregon for this article alone. If the Oregon and California Railroad Company would reduce the freight on limestone from Roseburg, there need not be a pound of limestone imported from San Juan. As it is, the most of limestone is locked up in the mountains of Douglas county, except to a very limited extent, waiting the energy, enterprise and business capacity of some company that will give the proper encouragement to develop this and similar industries.

THE VILLAGE OF OSWEGO

Has its [illegible] nothing of its former bustle and business appearance; all the houses are occupied, and the steady growth of the place is guaranteed by the increasing success of the Company's Iron Works. The site of the town is elevated and commands a good view of the Willamette river and a good front view of the country for many miles. The timbered land for many miles in the neighborhood of Oswego is admirably adapted for raising fruit to perfection. The trees are well protected from storms; the ground is high, rolling and lies well to the sun; the soil is a sandy clay, rich, productive and requires no irrigation. A visit to

MESSRS GEO. W. WALLING & SONS

Orchard and nursery will satisfy the most casual observer of the truth of these statements. Their place, known as the Willamette Orchard and Nursery, is located two miles above Oswego. They have forty acres embraced in their orchard and nursery, and will increase it one acre by year until they have a hundred acres planted. They have 1,000 plum trees, 1,000 pear trees, 600 cherry trees and 400 apple trees bearing fruit. They excel in raising the peach plum, the result of their own cultivation, it is one of the largest, richest and best for drying and cooking in the United States. It is a universal favorite wherever known—the demand for them, when dried, is unlimited in the Eastern States, and no fruit pays better. Their Italian, German and French prunes are almost as distinguished as are their peach plums. Oregon is the only State in the Union where the genuine prune is cultivated to perfection.

Their cherries are very fine, such as the May Duke, Major Francis, Black Tartarian, Royal Ann and Black Republican.

They have 300,000 fruit trees in their nursery, at their private residence, and the same number in their nursery in the immediate neighborhood of Oswego, including all their choicest kinds and many other varieties not mentioned. Last year they sold $3,000 worth of plums. This season the plum trees have not borne so well with them. The peach plum trees begin to bear when three years old. A tree will produce a bushel of plums when four years old; at eight, when the trees are at maturity, it will yield eight bushels of 60 pounds each to the bushel, making 480 pounds to a full grown tree.

These statements go to show the value of cultivating choice fruit when convenient to market or having facilities to ship. At present the market is overstocked with apples and have not paid any profit for raising them for some years.

MR. A. R. [illegible]

Located two miles west of Oswego, has a [illegible] garden for raising small fruits and berries for the Portland market. He is cultivating an extensive vinery that will pay him well in one or two years more.

MR. S. LUELLING,

Of Milwaukie, ranks among the best fruit raisers and nurserymen in the State. His peaches, pears, cherries, plums, prunes and berries are equal to any in the Portland market. He gives his undivided attention to this business, and understanding it thoroughly he has made it a decided success. So much for men [illegible] in a good business under any [illegible] highly and attending to it perseveringly. These gentlemen are all as distinguished in the private and public walks of life for their integrity of character and honorable dealing as they are for raising the best fruit and the best fruit trees in the State.

THE BEECHER-TILTON CASE.

THE TRIBUNE ON MOULTON AND MRS TILTON

NEW YORK, August —The Tribune in its editorial to-day says:

F. D. Moulton still fails either to make an appearance before the Brooklyn Committee or give them any opportunity to determine the genuineness of the letter by Beecher. It is said he told his friends that he has the key of the situation and that his position is a hard one at best. He is perfectly right in refusing to testify until after Beecher has been heard, in order that he may then be able to meet the latest phases of the case. The public will be apt to hold that Moulton, by virtue of the place of go-between he seems to have sought, is bound to tell what he knows; that he is really responsible for Tilton's charges, and must either prove them true or accept also the responsibility for an attempt at moral murder they involve. Mrs. Tilton's last examination reveals a pitiful and sickening story. It seems to bear the impress of truth, but it does not go to the marrow of the matter, the point on which everything turns, viz: "What sufficient warrant was there for Mr. Beecher's letter?"

THE TESTIMONY TO CLOSE TO-NIGHT

NEW YORK, August 3—The Brooklyn Eagle this afternoon publishes the following card from H. W. Sage, Chairman of the Investigating Committee in the Beecher-Tilton case:

"The Plymouth Church Investigating Committee earnestly request all persons who have been invited to testify before them in the matter now under examination to appear before them to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, at 8 o'clock, as that will probably be the last meeting of the Committee for receiving testimony.

TILTON'S ULTIMATUM

BROOKLYN, August 3—The Eagle this afternoon published a lengthy interview between Rev. Matthew Hale Smith, of Brooklyn, and Tilton, in which the latter says that when he appeared first before the Committee he expressed a desire to tell the story of his wrongs in private and in confidence to Mr. Sage, and leave it to his sense of honor and justice to say what should be done. It was opposed by Tracy and several members of the Committee, who insisted on a full divulgence of Tilton's cause of grievance against Beecher. Tilton was much surprised by the publication of his statement, and says Maverick, after having offered it, copy it had surreptitiously made a second copy, from which the types were set. The affair had now gone too far for a compromise. The story of his wrongs was out and by no instrumentality of his. His wife had been induced to leave him and their home, and family relations had been destroyed. Added to this, Beecher's friends had produced the impression that Tilton had slandered his pastor out of mere personal pique or a jealousy of his fame. The ultimatum, said Tilton, is that Mr. Beecher shall resign his charge. "That is the expiation of his fault that I ask." Tilton further said that if the Committee did not do him justice he would pursue the case further by such means as his legal advisers should recommend.

MR. SMITH'S OPINION

After the interview Mr. Smith was asked what he thought of the case, and he said he would not give his own opinion as to Beecher's guilt or innocence, but what he regarded as the popular opinion relative to the status of the case. He said the only two things the public now want are to have Beecher say unequivocally whether the letters or quotations from letters reproduced in Tilton's statement are genuine, and if so what they may mean, and the circumstances under which they were written. Let him explain these letters and no other testimony will be asked for, and the verdict of the public will be almost unanimous one way or the other, and as correct as it will be unanimous.

ANOTHER CRITICAL OPINION

Another gentleman said that the public have lost sight of the great fact that the letters alleged to have been written by Beecher to Mrs. Tilton may either not be genuine or misunderstood. Beecher neither affirms nor denies that he wrote letters. If he wrote them it is conceded that he did not keep duplicates. Should Tilton produce the letters, then it becomes a question whether they are really in Beecher's handwriting, a question which could only be settled by a comparison made by experts. It does not appear that the letters have been mislaid or destroyed. What proof is there that there was any criminal intercourse between Beecher and Mrs. Tilton? The great question is can Tilton produce the letters which he embodied in his statement, and why has he not done so? If he has not the letters in his possession or if he has not furnished correct copies so far as they relate to certain expressions said to have been used by Beecher, he cannot prove that the accusations he has made are true.

The members of the Committee say the work will probably end to-morrow night, when all the testimony, except of minor importance, will be published. Beecher's statement goes into press as soon as he makes it, which will probably be in a day or two.

OUR PRODUCTS.

Under date of August 4th, 1874, Hon. I. R. Moores, Commissioner of the Railroad Land Office, has prepared the following circular for general distribution, which will best explain the object sought for:

This office is desirous of making a full collection of the grains, grasses and textile plants, together with specimens of minerals, stone, earths, and in fact any products of our fields, forests and mines, for exhibition here and transmission to Europe and the Eastern States, to illustrate the varied resources of our State, with a view to calling attention and inducing immigration. We want the choicest specimens of grain, flax, hemp, etc., in bundles showing the height, size and strength of stalk, with a note giving name of producer, place where grown, product per acre, etc., and also clean seed. All packages left at any of the stations on the line of our road will arrive here in as good order as when started.

If you will have the kindness to forward such samples to us in the manner indicated you will be the means of assisting very materially in directing the attention of many in the Old World as well as in the United States to the unparalleled resources of Oregon, and thereby indirectly receive a personal benefit yourself. Any reasonable expenses incurred in collecting and packing samples will be paid. Please call the attention of some of your neighbors to the within, and oblige. Yours very respectfully,

I. R. MOORES,
Commissioner Railroad Land Office.

[illegible] CAUSE OFFICER.—A Chicago special of the 3d inst. says Attorney General Williams, when he left Washington, intended [illegible] friends that he desired it. He [illegible] instructions to his chief clerk not to communicate with him on affairs of business unless in his judgment his action was absolutely needed. There have been repeated inquiries made of him by delegations from the South seeking some small favors, and the chief clerk, declining to have Mr. Williams interrupted in his recess, saw fit to refuse to tell them where a telegram would reach him. This forms the basis for the paragraph which is being sent from this city, stating that he is lost and that not even his wife or the President know where he is sojourning.

OFFICIALS AT CHICAGO TO BE INDICTED.—Chicago, July 31st.—It is alleged that several members of the Common Council will be indicted for having sold their votes during the recent election of architects for the new Court House. The matter is now under consideration.

OREGON

Dr. Alexander, of Linn county, is again reported dangerously ill.

The Oregon Granger is to be enlarged. An evidence of prosperity.

The next term of the Willamette University commences the 7th of September.

A Washington county farmer has 600 bushels of new wheat in store at Corvallis.

Circuit Court will begin at Astoria on Monday next. The calendar is larger than usual.

Playing [illegible] for hazelnuts is a favorite amusement with the Lafayette hoodlums just now.

The schooner Alice, built at Alsea, is daily expected to arrive at Newport, from San Francisco.

Seventy cents a bushel is the price for wheat at Salem, and sixty-five cents in the towns above.

Mr. Covan's farm house, near Albany, was burglarized of $82 while he was absent a few days ago.

Forest Grove's Charter don't suit her people. The next Legislature will be asked to amend it.

Upwards of 2,500 bushels of new wheat were received at the Salem flouring mills Wednesday.

Columbus Brown has been appointed Deputy Collector of Customs at Astoria, under W. D. Hare, with a salary of $1,500 a year.

Milton Hale, hurt at Albany last week, is said to be in a worse condition than was first supposed. It is feared he will not recover.

Mr. D. D. Smith, one of the publishers of the Benton Democrat, has retired, and his place is filled by Mr. C. H. Humphrey, of Albany.

No drought, chinch bugs, grasshoppers, locusts, potato bugs, weevil or caterpillars to hurt the crops or fruits of Oregon this season.

A field of fall wheat near Cornelius averaged 40 bushels to the acre, notwithstanding a good deal of it had been lodged by late spring rains.

Mr. Andrew Wright was thrown from a mule at North Yamhill a few days ago and seriously hurt, but it is hoped he will recover.

They say there are more mechanics employed in McMinnville now than there are in any other town of its size in the State. We don't know.

Some villain tried to set fire to the tug Varuna, at Astoria, on the night of the 4th. A reward of $500 is offered for the apprehension of the incendiary.

Mr. Beardsly, Agent of the Alden Fruit Drying and Preserving Company, has effected the organization of a company for that manufacture in Salem.

J. M. Johns, of Salem, has been appointed resident agent for the Willamette River Transportation Company at that place, in place of S. F. Brown, relieved.

Farmers near Sheridan, so we are informed, will commence harvesting in good earnest about Monday next. Only a few of them have commenced to cut wheat.

A party of young ladies from Albany got lost last Sunday in the woods between the Calapooia and the Willamette, and didn't find themselves until about dark.

A Miss Lane, of Harrisburg, was badly hurt a few days ago. The horses attached to a buggy in which she was riding ran off, and she was thrown out against a fence.

One day last week George Hill's team ran away at Halsey, threw him out and came within an ace of making a cold corpse of him. One of the horses succeeded in killing himself.

Joe Spendel, of the Albany blacksmith shop, was so unfortunate as to receive a painful wound in his right eye last Monday, which came near depriving him of its use forever. A piece of red hot iron struck the ball of the eye and both lacerated and burned it.

The following is the ticket elected in Astoria on Monday, the 3d inst.: Mayor, Col. R. R. Spedden; Recorder, H. B. Parker; Treasurer, David Ingalls; Councilmen, John W. Gearhart and F. Ferrell; Street Commissioner, Jas. Welch; Marshal, William Oliver. Whole number of votes cast, 118.

Rev. B. R. Baxter informs the Gazette that from the product of ten cents worth of turnip seed of the "Six Weeks," or "Snow Ball" variety, received from James Vick, of Rochester, N. Y., he has this year sold $18.11 worth, had plenty for family use, and still has on hand several bushels of small ones which he purposes feeding to the hogs.

At Albany, Harry Benjamin had his finger torn open to the bone while shoeing a horse. Ike Conn fell from the second story of a warehouse and struck his head on a sharp-edged board, cutting a severe gash above his eye. Dr. Crawford received a few bruises by a horse upon which he was riding falling down with him. All happened the past week.

A correspondent on the summit of Mary's Peak, in Benton county, writes us that during the month of July fifty-nine tourists visited that mountain. The weather for the past week has not been propitious for an extended view on account of prevailing fogs and clouds. There are 1,774 sheep and 22 horses now grazing on the luxuriant grasses that cover the sides of this grand old pile.

As the train passed up on Friday of last week sparks from the locomotive set fire to the dry grass and stubble near the track below Halsey, destroying several tons of new mown hay in the field and burning over a fine orchard, probably destroying the fruit and injuring the trees. A wall of unripe grain, probably barley, proved a check to the further progress of the fire and doubtless saved an immense amount of grain and other property.

From the Lafayette Courier we learn that a regular riot occurred at Standley's mill, in North Yamhill, on Sunday, August 2d, between two families living under the same roof, named respectively Daniels and Day. A number of hired men and the women and children of both families joined, and shovels, brooms, clubs, axes, knives and guns were brandished, but nobody was badly hurt. Three of the parties were held to answer before the grand jury.

The McMinnville Reporter of the 7th says: "Up to this time harvest work has been confined merely to here and there a field, of those who were somewhat advanced with their work and were in better readiness for harvest than the generality. Now, however, the work seems to be starting in earnest and every available man and team is engaged at some farm or other. There are several machines in motion near this place. As yet we have seen but one load of grain on the street."

The Superintendent of the Penitentiary has had machinery put in the old prison building to prepare flax for shipment. Last year a ton of Oregon flax was prepared by hand and sent as a sample to Ireland. It was found by the manufacturers of linen to be superior to any flax grown in the world, with the exception of that grown to a limited extent in one of the interior States of Germany. Oregon raises the best wheat, produces the best wool, and now is in a fair way to stand foremost in the culture of flax. Two brothers by the name of Smith, from Europe, are in Oregon and have made arrangements to ship at least one hundred tons this season to Ireland.

The annual circular of the Corvallis Agricultural College has just been issued, from which we learn that the fall term will open on Thursday, the first day of September, 1874. The Faculty consists of B. L. Arnold, A. M., President and Professor of Moral Philosophy and Physics; Rev. J. Emory, A. M., Professor of Mathematics; B. J. Hawthorne, A. M., Professor of Languages; Miss Irene Smith, Primary Department; Miss Viola Briggs, Music Department; Brevet Captain B. D. Boswell, U. S. A., Military Department. The law provides for the free tuition of sixty students—two from each State Senatorial District. Persons under sixteen years of age, desiring to avail themselves of the benefits of this law, may do so by applying to the proper Senator, or to President Arnold, in Corvallis.

THE TERRITORIES

Oil from dog fish and sharks will soon be one of the exports from Puget Sound.

Capt. Blinn has four miners, two of them English coal miners, opening his coal vein near Chehalis station.

Yelm Jim, a noted Indian living on Yelm Prairie, had his ranch burned up a few days ago, destroying all its contents.

Olympia youths of both sexes enjoy bathing in moonlight at this season of the year. Of course they go in proper costume.

The Courier of Olympia thinks the voters of that place and of Tumwater can carry Thurston county in favor of issuing bonds to the Olympia and Tenino R. R. Co. The election will take place August 10th.

The Olympia Courier says a discovery of gravel laden with some kind of metal has been discovered in that town, but the excitement over rich diggings has not reached its height.

Several parties at Seattle, taking advantage of the unsettled condition of the title to the Maynard-McAleer land claim, have busied themselves lately in jumping the same, until quite a settlement has sprung up in that direction.

A Council to advise with the Baptist Church at Olympia as to the expediency of ordaining Roger S. Greene to be the elder of that church will meet at 10 o'clock A. M. of Wednesday next. If ordination is judged expedient, notice will be given of the exercises as early as possible.

From a private letter from Yakima county, the Courier gathers the following statistics regarding that county: Horses, 4,372; mules, 154; beef cattle, 5,853; cows, 12,083; yearlings, 8,242; sheep, 2,203; hogs, 939; acres of wheat, 1,510; oats, 928; barley, 119; potatoes, 103; corn, 270; number of orchards, 35; male adults, 366; female adults, 179; children, 481. Total population, 1,026. From other sources we learn that the crops on the Yakima are not heavy this year, but are sufficient for the use of the people. Cows with calves are worth from $10 to $13; yearlings, $6 to $7; two-year olds, $12; three year olds, $13 to $16; beef cattle, three cents per pound; good American work horses, $100; Cayuses, from $2.50 to $12.

PUGET SOUND ITEMS

A gentleman now sojourning along the Sound sends the following notes:

The steamer Alida connects with Olympia from Tacoma.

Gen. Sprague and family are now on a summering tour to Victoria.

Capt. J. C. Ainsworth and family are summering at Gravelly lake; also J. B. Congle and wife, and M. S. Burrell.

A splendid thunder storm visited Kalama and the adjacent country on the 5th inst. There was plenty of thunder and lightning, but little rain.

The steamer North Pacific awaits the arrival of the train at Tacoma on Wednesday, so that passengers can make the connection down the Sound and over to Victoria.

A train consisting of two passenger coaches and five freight cars, passed over the N. P. R. R. on Wednesday and Thursday, fifteen cars, loaded with lime and rock, passed from Tacoma to Kalama.

Mr. Lloyd Brooke and daughter, Rev. J. Rosenberg, and about twenty others from Portland, passed over the railroad on Thursday en route for Victoria; also Col. Wharton, of Kalama, and Dr. J. R. Baily, of Corvallis.

THE STOLEN BOY

INTERVIEW WITH THE BROTHER OF CHARLEY ROSS

[Philadelphia Corr. N. Y. Herald.]

I had a conversation with the elder boy, Walter Ross, to-day. He is an exceedingly intelligent boy for his age, which is eight years. His words and the way in which he tells the story carry conviction with them.

"Now, Walter," said I, "I want to hear the story from your lips—the whole of it."

He replied as follows:

"These men had been in the habit of passing our house, as my mother told you, for some days previous. I had seen them; they had talked to both of us boys—I mean Charley and I. They had given us candy, and, to tell the truth, we rather liked the men. I did at least. I told mother that they were good men. I formed this opinion of them because they gave us candy. These men had frequently spoken to us there, and whenever we saw them coming along we slipped out on the pavement to talk to them, in the hope that they would give us more candy."

"Did they ever ask you to ride before the day of the kidnapping?" I asked.

"Yes, I believe they did once, but I would not go," replied the boy.

"Now, tell me about your ride. How did they get you into the buggy?"

"The men drove along up from the railroad toward our house. We were on the sidewalk and saw them coming. Poor little Charley saw them when they came close and clapped his hands, saying, 'Please, sir, got any candy?' The big man—the solid one—said that he hadn't any that day, but that if we would get in and ride he would take us where we could get some. He also said he'd give us firecrackers on the Fourth. Thinking that he would carry us up to the main street I got in after the other man had helped Charley in. The man driving at once turned around and started back in the same way as he had come. I asked him where he was going. He said, 'I will take you up to Aunt Susie's, just above here, where you can get more candy and firecrackers for the money.' I like to have plenty of firecrackers, and we drove along, each moment expecting to come to 'Aunt Susie's.' Now, of course, we knew there was no such place. This is the reason I know the road so well. I was watching all the time. The men never spoke to each other. They asked us the names of our little sister and parents. I had no idea exactly where we were being taken, but knew it was not far away from home. At last I grew very impatient as it began to get along towards dark, so I cried till they let me out to go after fire crackers for myself and candy for Charley. When I went back the buggy and men were gone. That is all I know."

SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 8, 1874.

THE RAILWAY ORGAN'S TASK

In the commercial column of the Portland Bulletin of yesterday there occurs a somewhat lengthy paragraph on the subject of railways which deserves more than a passing notice Owned by Mr Ben Holladay, and run exclusively in his interest, there is no reason to expect from the Bulletin that fairness of statement or impartiality of judgment which are supposed to characterize those journals that are free from that sort of control Nevertheless it would seem there ought to be a limit somewhere to the liberties which a newspaper, even though devoted solely to the fortunes of a single individual may be expected to take with truth and reason, in the advocacy of the cause of its patron To those who think such a limit does not exist, the arbitrary power assumed by the Bulletin over the facts of history and the arbitrary manner in which the blessings of civilization in this Republic are all lumped together and placed to the credit of the railway magnates while all the misfortunes of the times are set down to the account of the farmers and other producing classes will open up a new vision of the capabilities of railway journalism At the risk of extending this article to a greater length than the convenience of the reader might appear to suggest we present the paragraph from the Bulletin in full

> The war against railroads which has been carried on with such blind malice on this coast, and with such short-sighted impolicy in the Western States will no doubt, have the effect of retarding the growth of those States at least a quarter of a century and of building up the future fortunes of the railways If we look back thirty years only during which 3 800 000 000 of capital have been spent in the construction of 70 000 miles of railroads throughout the country and in which time six millions of immigrants have arrived in the United States following the various lines of railroads and overrunning the vast fertile tracts of new land laid open by the railroads and formed into States we shall find the reason why agriculture has taken such rapid strides causing the production of food to outrun the demand for it until farming even on the best lands became unprofitable and ruinous on the poor lands Railroads equalized the value of lands by making the most remote accessible to market and therefore caused discontent among those farmers in the older sections who encountered competition from the products of the more remote lands opened by the railroads The general result was a superabundance of agricultural produce dependent upon the English market to pay the cost of transportation With singular short-sightedness the farmers laboring under discontent from this cause, attacked the railroads for charging too much for transportation and these attacks now take the shape of threatened confiscation The first effect has been to stop railroad construction to discharge the thousands of hands who have thus been forced to become cultivators, thus increasing the already too great supply of food the outlet for the surplus of which depends upon what England harvests The further construction of railroads is stopped and also, further investments of capital in any enterprises which may run the risk of a similar confiscation by a ruthless majority It is not probable that in the present age this barbarian claim of the right to confiscate railroad property—a claim which strikes at the root of all society and civilization—can be made good If it can strike railroad property it can destroy any other which may be considered inimical to other interests It has been justly pointed out in the New York papers that to confer upon Legislatures—which it has been alleged, are purchasable by corporations—the power to make or mar corporate prosperity by apparently trifling changes in rates of freights and fares is only to make their services more valuable to the corporations, to make detection less to be dreaded and corruption more safe as well as profitable But there has been a check given to the construction of railroads Land grants and subsidies are no longer possible The building of railroads must, therefore, involve a full subscription of the whole cost from private capital with the assumed right of the majority of the Legislature to confiscate that capital in the interest of the users of the road at its pleasure

We are almost persuaded that any further remarks of ours upon these extraordinary utterances of the railway organ are superfluous, as they furnish their own answer in their manifest absurdity Like an overdose of poison taken into the stomach, they are likely to produce such violent [illegible] as to cause their expulsion, thus becoming their own antidote However, we crave indulgence for a few words upon some of the most prominent among a series of statements and conclusions, all of which are remarkable

1 The demand for fair dealing between the railway companies and the farmers is characterized as "The war against railroads." This war is said to have been carried on with "blind malice" on this coast, but only with "short-sighted impolicy" elsewhere There is no war against railways No considerable number of persons can be found on this coast, or anywhere else, we opine, who are opposed to railways or feel any hostility to those who manage them legitimately In Oregon—and California, too—the very people who have been pressing the demand for fair dealing by the railway companies, and who are mentioned by the Bulletin as persons actuated by "blind malice" have themselves contributed money to build the roads In Oregon the people whom Mr Holladay thus assails through his paper have put in thousands nay, hundreds of thousands of dollars in the form of local subsidies to push his railway enterprises along while he has never put in a single dollar of his own means The building of the roads was a source of profit to him instead of a burden, it was a burden instead of a source of profit to them and now he, grown rich partly upon their generosity, turns upon the farmers and business men and berates them as creatures blindly malicious, because they dare express their disapproval of the reckless and dishonest practices by which he has wronged and oppressed them Nor will they readily see why their conduct is singled out by him to be spoken of in the most offensive words his editor can command, while those of their class in other States who have pushed their opposition to railway tyranny to far greater lengths, are only mentioned as pursuing innocently enough, a "short sighted policy" Does Mr Ben Holladay hold that there is something peculiarly criminal in the act of subsidizing him that he reserves his bitterest forms of speech for those who have contributed to that object?

2 Next, all the prosperity of these United States during the last thirty years is attributed to the building of 70,000 miles of railway, at a cost of $3,600,000,000 Freely conceding that the railways have performed an important part in the marvellous strides with which America has gone forward during the period mentioned we had supposed there were some other agencies at work besides the railways Whence came the three billions? Who dug it out of the earth? Who crushed it from the rocks? Who eliminated it from the soil in the form of wheat, oats, cotton wool, hay sugar, wine, corn, butter, bacon, and the various other products of farm industry? And is none of these things done save where the immediate stimulus of the railways is felt? And were there no such industries in existence before the railway era?

3 It is stated that the value of agricultural lands has appreciated mainly through the influence of the railways Those who think thus, have not attended closely to the facts The last report of the New York State Board of Assessors threw some light on this subject, which astonished the people at large and caused no little fluttering among the railway managers They reported that a careful investigation led to the conclusion that while the lands in the towns and cities and immediately around the railway stations advanced in value lands situated a short distance away were worth no more in the market than they were ten years ago but that in sections not penetrated at all by railways, town lands showed no improvement in value while agricultural lands were steadily advancing

4 The proposition to regulate freight tariffs by law is pronounced by the Bulletin a threat of confiscation of the capital invested in the construction of the roads How is it about locks, and ferries and toll roads? These have been deemed proper subjects of legislative restriction from time immemorial, and nobody has inveighed against the exercise of the power as a threat of confiscation But, as there any real danger that rates will be put so low as to amount to confiscation or anything of the sort? Certes, the Legislatures have not heretofore, as a general thing, shown themselves very zealous or very solidly united in legislating against the interests of great combinations of capital, especially railway companies Besides, is there stronger probability that the legislators, having, presumably, no pecuniary interest involved, will be unjust to the railways than that the owners of the railways having direct money interests, and placed under the greatest of temptations, will be unjust to the people?

5 And then the public is presented by the Bulletin with a rehash of a stale fallacy from some New York paper, to the effect that since the corporations have been in the habit of bribing the Legislatures, no attempt should be made to check their rapacity or restrain their oppressions lest they be tempted to still further and more colossal briberies If the Bulletin's suppression of the name of the New York paper that first advanced this rogue's argument, is at the request of the New York editor, it shows he has good judgment, notwithstanding the moral obliquity apparent in his mode of reasoning

These are but a part of the absurdities contained in the medley of nonsense and false reasoning quoted from the Bulletin, but they form the staple of all the arguments with which the railway organs throughout the country are accustomed to meet the demand of the farmers and other working classes for equality, before the law The Bulletin has only presented the position of the monopolists in a more bald and repulsive form than that in which it is commonly presented Upon just such shallow trumpery rests the whole claim of the railway rings to exemption from the same legislative control to which all others are subject

EXPENDING THE APPROPRIATIONS

Now is the time to expend the splendid appropriation of $7 500 allowed by Congress for the improvement of the upper Wallamet, and the gigantic sum whose vastness so overwhelmed our memory that we have forgotten it, which is to be expended on the Columbia The water is getting low and the snags and bars are accessible There is no doubt that with careful management these munificent appropriations for our rivers will prove sufficient to pull out half a dozen sawyers and remove thirty or forty cubic yards of gravel and mud, besides purchasing at least ten pounds of giant powder to blast out the Cascades of the Columbia We are informed that something is now doing in these various improvements of our rivers, and it is pleasant to be able to announce the fact The liberal sums of money on hand for prosecuting the work justifies the hope that if no more obstructions shall lodge in these two great rivers during the next hundred and fifty years, and the same liberal appropriations be made from year to year, the navigation will be perceptibly improved

While speaking of the expenditure of public moneys it is in place to remark that Ben Simpson has already let surveying contracts covering the entire amount of his $60,000 appropriation, and that it is said he is not very hard up now a days

THE RAIN AND THE CROPS

We understand the farmers are becoming quite anxious about their harvest, on account of the continuance of the rain The thunder shower of Wednesday although it extended over most of the entire Wallamet Valley, would have done no damage had the rain ceased there But the continued moist weather threatens injury to a vast amount of grain The earliest fields are down, some of them threshed and housed but only the earliest Later winter wheat as well as many fields of oats are ripe and awaiting the reaper, while spring wheat is just in a condition to suffer from rust or be thrown down Rust, which destroys so much ripening wheat in the Atlantic States it has been said is unknown in Oregon but a farmer who speaks from personal knowledge informs us that he has seen fields badly injured by it in this valley Still the rainfall has not been sufficient to do a very great amount of damage Should the weather clear up now the loss would be trifling but should it continue wet for a few days more the result will be quite disastrous

After 21 unsuccessful ballots for candidate for Delegate to Congress in the Territorial Democratic Convention of Colorado everybody else was withdrawn and Thomas M Patterson of Arapahoe county was nominated by acclamation As usual where there is such contest as is attested by the number of ballots taken much bitter feeling was the result

[illegible] —Mr [illegible] B Scott late of [illegible] engaged in the construction of a [illegible] at [illegible] Cincinnati. Work was commenced [illegible] weeks ago and on Thursday the [illegible] was launched from the ways. Mould [illegible] plans, draught etc were prepared by Mr Scott [illegible] the work was performed by Mr [illegible] under the personal superintendence of [illegible] for the gentlemen. The dimensions of the new craft are length 140 feet beam [illegible] feet hold [illegible] feet. When finished the boat will have a capacity of about 170 tons. She will [illegible] lightest draught of any boat [illegible] river of equal dimensions [illegible] when the machinery [illegible] and the upper works built the boat will draw between [illegible] inches. With [illegible] this boat can ascend the Willamette [illegible] highest navigable points and [illegible] at the lowest stage of water when [illegible] boats can not run at all. The [illegible] will be a stern wheeler propelled [illegible] machinery formerly used on the old [illegible]. The machinery has been [illegible] overhauled and placed in the best [illegible] condition for service. In a few days [illegible] will be towed down through the locks [illegible] where the engine and boiler will be placed [illegible] and the cabin built. As yet [illegible] not been christened but the [illegible] builder thinks of calling her the [illegible]. When completed the Eightieth will ply between [illegible] and points along the Upper Willamette [illegible] the new boat is expected to make the trial trip.

Cassiar Gold Mines.—From Mr H Ter[illegible] who arrived by the steamer California last evening and just from the field of operation on Deas Creek we learn a few items of interest in reference to that section. The Government trail had been completed and is now a toll road. Provisions was still very high in the mines, and would probably be held at the present figures during the [illegible]. A large town was built, some sixty houses but business very dull. Some few mines on [illegible] creek [illegible] paying fairly but the greater number of [illegible] which were supposed to contain untold wealth are found to be almost if not entirely barren of the precious metal. The discovery claim, some two miles up the creek owned by Mr Moore and others, was paying quite well [illegible] also was the Boulder claim owned by Mr S Lewis & Co. The diggings on [illegible]bert creek are not exactly a fizzle but amount to about nothing. The prospect on Baby creek failed to pan out and the same result was arrived at in nearly all of the diggings outside of Deas creek. Over one hundred men came out of the country on the steamer Otter for Victoria and many more will return by the next steamer. The going wages in the mines are $8 per day but few men find employment at that figure as the yield of the mines will not admit of it.

The Court Martial.—As mentioned in yesterday's issue a Court Martial convened in this city on Thursday morning for the trial of Major V S Eggleston for alleged defalcation of Government funds. The following officers have been detailed for Court Martial duty: Gen Alfred Sully President of the Court, Col Frank Wheaton, Dr Bailey, Col Bachelder, Col Green, Capt Sumner and Major H Clay Wood Judge Advocate. By permission of the Court J H Reed Esq was allowed to act as counsel for the defendant, Major Eggleston. During Thursday a number of witnesses were examined in behalf of the prosecution. Most of the testimony for the prosecution was taken on the first day. Yesterday morning on the assembling of the Court the proceedings of Thursday were read when application was made by counsel for defendant for a continuance of the case. The motion was allowed and the Court adjourned until the 3d of September. The application for a continuance of the case was made and allowed for the purpose of enabling both prosecution and defense to obtain some necessary evidence. In addition to some documentary evidence the prosecution [illegible] to examine Inspector General N H Davis who will be in attendance on the Court at the time to which it has adjourned.

From Deas Creek.—Mr W G Wright a gentleman who resides in Seattle writing in a late number of the Intelligencer from Deas Creek says: I took passage on the steamer Isabel from Victoria to Fort Wrangell, from Wrangell to the head of steamboat navigation on the steamer Glenora. From the latter point to Deas Lake the distance being 100 miles and it [illegible] a very good mountain trail I made the trip on foot in [illegible] days. Well from what I can learn there are some very rich claims here. There is plenty of gold dust in circulation which is a very good sign. The stream is very high and it will be very hard to work. I was told that the miners from Omineca came here last winter and recorded from thirty to forty claims apiece which was so much labor lost as the claims were jumped. There is plenty of snow and ice here which will impede prospecting until some time in August.

[illegible] Concert.—Commencing at 7 o'clock the Portland Brass Band will play the following programme: Parade March [illegible] Sweet Spirit Hear my Prayer Wallace; [illegible] Waltzes [illegible]; Over the Nebuchadnezzar Verdi; [illegible] Brenner; Jolly Brothers [illegible]. For the past two months the [illegible] two concerts a week with [illegible] they have barely received enough money from liberal [illegible] to buy even a brass horn, and unless they receive proper compensation they will not of course hereafter [illegible] the above place. A fund of not less than $50 a month would seem sufficient to warrant their giving a free concert twice a week. We hope the concerts will be continued at least on Saturday evenings.

Returned.—Prof Williamson and a party of nine persons who left Portland last Saturday for Mount Hood returned home yesterday. They [illegible] experienced a pleasant but [illegible]. None of the party reached the summit [illegible] not [illegible] to scale the lofty heights. The party [illegible] the [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] which is said to have been [illegible] magnificent.

AMUSEMENTS

We have the honor of announcing to the public that the third and last concert of the series will be given this evening at Masonic Hall by Madame Bishop assisted by a number of talented artists. Of the merits of the individuals composing the company or of the highly delightful character of the entertainments afforded we need not speak in this connection. All which has been urged in commendation of the company by the public press we heartily reiterate. To appreciate the entertainment it is necessary for one to go and hear it, a thing which we would urge all to do. OUT-DOOR SPORTS

Rickey's nine beat Bell's nine at Salem on Thursday 61 to 56. R H Austin of the Arcadian Club umpired. The playing judging from the score wasn't anything to compare with that between the printers last Saturday.

Here is a base ball item from the Astorian: "The Dirty Stockings of Oysterville are anxious to play a match game of base ball. They have a Vampire and nine captains for the first [illegible] and will guarantee to catch more runs than any other company organized."

On the 28th ult the Chicagos and Atlantics played at Chicago for the benefit of Jimmy Wood a disabled member of the former club. Three thousand five hundred dollars was the amount netted for the beneficiary which indicates that they take an interest in base ball even in burned Chicago.

Commencing at 1 30 this afternoon a match game of Cricket will be played at the East Portland grounds between a picked eleven from the St George Cricket Club and eleven from the Pioneer Base Ball Club. The following have been selected from the St George Club: Gilman, Rome, Andrew, Sykes, McDonald, Ford, Good, Brown, Lancaster, Webb, [illegible]. OREGON MUSEUM

As a matter of interest to the public and to call the attention of the people of our State to an enterprise now fairly under way and constantly growing which will proper encouragement may become one of great interest and permanent advantage to our city and State we yesterday made a thorough examination of the above institution. Though we had casually looked through the rooms before but upon a more careful survey we were surprised at the extent of the various collections of animals, birds, reptiles, fishes, minerals etc which are here gathered and preserved in the best possible style of taxidermy. It would be impossible [illegible] all from the savage looking lion and [illegible] other [illegible] from the great American [illegible] and the monstrous [illegible] the [illegible] but the live rattle snake and the deadly scorpion the whales [illegible] the [illegible] everything of the kind can here be [illegible] and studied, giving the spectator [illegible] wonderful [illegible] zoology.

The department devoted to mineralogy is [illegible] complete containing specimens from almost every part of the globe and [illegible] over 10,000 different articles of iron, copper, lead, tin, platina, cinnabar, silver, gold etc in their diverse forms [illegible] and from the various mines of earth. Thousands of shells from the bed of old ocean [illegible] of the most beautiful are also seen here. In the mineral department alone the [illegible] could spend days in investigation without running short of material.

But the line in which the proprietors have been particularly successful is their selection of

RELICS AND CURIOSITIES

Which in point of interest and variety are unsurpassed in some of the celebrated museums of the older cities of our country. One cannot expect a description here that will give even a faint idea of the collection but it embraces many articles which have unmistakable historical interest such as coins 2,000 years old, a beheading axe of the time of Robespierre, cannon balls fired from the guns of the Spanish conquerors of South America, African knives, Chinese and Japanese swords, carvings, paintings etc together with relics of interesting times and places in our own country's history too numerous to name.

Arrangements are being made and will soon be completed by which the agricultural productions of our State can be preserved for inspection at all times thus giving the visitor the most complete idea of our resources and advantages that can be obtained without long travel and close observation. Persons who are unacquainted with Oregon will be able here to see samples of her products without trouble and naturalists can gather material for discussion and thought while the curious can hardly fail to find something always new and gratifying.

Among those who have lent their aid and patronage to the Museum are some of our most influential citizens, and all should visit it and see what has been done and encourage this institution which with the more perfect arrangements contemplated can be made a material advantage to our State in attracting attention to her resources and imparting information of her wonders.

THE STAGE.

Bob Fulford and wife are still in the city.

John Wilson's circus was still in Colorado July 25.

Frank Mayo will be at Springfield, Mass., on the 17th inst.

PERSONAL.

J Mortimer Murphy the well known author of the Oregon State Directory is now in New York. He is a correspondent of the Forest and Stream and several other sporting journals.

Bishop Merrill of the Methodist Episcopal Church arrived in this city Thursday evening from Walla Walla where he has been presiding over the Conference assembled at that place. His friends will no doubt regret to learn that he is suffering from a severe neuralgic attack, from which however he is, we are glad to say rapidly recovering. He is accompanied by his wife who is in excellent health.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

T O'Connor & Co 426 Sansome near Clay street commission merchants dealers in Oregon and California produce advertise in another column.

Monnastes has removed to the store opposite his old stand and will continue to sell crockery, glassware etc at surprisingly low prices. Here is an excellent chance for housekeepers to lay in a supply of needed articles.

Mr A C Bailey resigned his office of Chief Engineer of the Oregon City Fire Department at the last meeting of the Council. A special election will be ordered to fill the vacancy.

For Fine and Artistic Photographs go to Buchtel & Stolte [illegible] First Street, the only First Class Gallery in the State.

In these times when men count their coin before expending any considerable sum it is conclusive evidence that money is decidedly scarce and a man is calculating on the best and surest mode of making the most of what spare change he has. Now in buying clothing the buyer reflects before making a purchase. He wants to know where by expending the least money he can at the same time receive something fully worth the money expended. We would advise all in want of something substantial as well as cheap to call on Beck & Waldman.

AT KOHN'S.

That pioneer Clothier J Kohn opposite the National Bank is affording his numerous patrons an excellent opportunity to buy Summer Suits, Underwear, Furnishing Goods. The dull times demand a reduction in the prices heretofore asked and he is giving his customers the benefit of a decided reduction [illegible] at his place. There is no humbug about it. What he says he will do. Take advantage of the present opportunity. Note the location.

Digestion consists essentially in a solution of the aliment in gastric juice. Whatever promotes the free and healthy [illegible] of that fluid will favor digestion. The reverse is true. Whatever impedes or impairs it will impair and impede the digestive process. The basis of Plantation Bitters [illegible] this desirable work and its ever increasing popularity is but the natural result of its merits.

The Good Old Remedy.—It will not do when your horse is attacked by the numerous ills which afflict equine nature to try experiments. Besides the suffering of the useful beast you endanger his life and your money. It is safest to have always ready the Mexican Mustang Liniment which everybody knows about. For nearly two decades of years this [illegible] been used and invariably with [illegible]. It [illegible] to try experiments with play things but not with medicines. It is dangerous. Therefore stick to the Mustang. It will bring man and horse through all right.

A Young Lady, inquiring the price of a flower bowed her face to smell it. The seller a smart Irish girl said "Please miss don't injure the sale of my flowers." "How can I?" asked the customer. "You see miss if a gintleman should see your cheeks by the side of my roses he would say they have lost their beauty. Please don't do it again." That young lady used Hagan's Magnolia Balm hence her beauteous complexion.

Keep Young.—It is needless to discuss the question whether a full head of hair is beautiful. The important matter is: How can hair be retained and beautified? The answer comes from every part of our land from [illegible] who have used [illegible] Lyon's Kathairon [illegible] is the best hair fertilizer. It renders the hair glossy [illegible] the original color [illegible] is Kathairon.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 8, 1874.

A REMARKABLE PARDON

[From the German.]

Forlimpopoli is a small town in the Papal States to which is attached the history of a pardon without a parallel, we believe, in history.

The hero of this narrative was a brigand chief Giacomo Sonnino by name. Giacomo was one of those genial, courteous robbers of whom we read occasionally in romance, one of those delightful fellows who levied their taxes with a certain blandness of manner that made their practices a pleasure rather than an infliction. He was, moreover, one of those clever individuals who are ubiquitous or nowhere, just as suits themselves. His hand was on every rich man's purse; yet, somehow or other, he could never be found "when wanted." His fame was wide spread; he deserved it.

Forlimpopoli had frequently heard of him. Forlimpopoli longed to behold him in propria persona. Forlimpopoli's wish was to be gratified. One evening was presented in Forlimpopoli's little theater a tragic drama, whose hero Ugolino wails and moans [illegible] from the opening of the piece to the [illegible]. At the beginning of the [illegible] cred in a dungeon [illegible] which [illegible] ducing [illegible] monotonous [illegible] ing cry of "Pane! pane!" ("[illegible]") The play had often [illegible] and was therefore well known to the [illegible] of the theater. The heart-rending refrain, "Pane! pane!" hurled forth night after night in stentorian tones by the lugubrious star, had begun to strike a portion of the public as being irresistibly comical. So they mercifully determined to [illegible] to the incessant demand for bread with appropriate action. On the evening in question Ugolino had scarcely gotten the words, "Pane! pane!" fairly out of his mouth, when suddenly loaves of bread, of all sizes and shapes, were showered upon him from every part of the auditorium. Of course the impressionable public enjoyed the thing hugely.

The evening's entertainment had been ushered in with diversion most exhilarating. It was doomed to a solemn finale.

The curtain had once more hidden the disconsolate Ugolino from the gaze of the audience when suddenly [illegible] and disclosed to view a spectacle for which the lookers-on were wholly unprepared. Instead of Ugolino there stood, in the center of the stage, the redoubted bandit Giacomo Sonnino surrounded by a score of his fierce followers all armed to the teeth. The band, who pretty well filled the stage, brought their carbines to an order that made the floor fairly groan. Thereupon Sonnino delivered himself of a terse and comprehensive speech, during which the house was so quiet that the dropping of a bodkin could have been easily heard. He explained that [illegible] purpose in making his debut before the public of Forlimpopoli was to accept a slight tribute from its inhabitants. He had come unostentatiously and quietly, and would depart in the same manner provided his wishes were complied with. If not, he [illegible] have to succumb to the disagreeable necessity of making light of the four corners of Forlimpopoli. Above all let no one conceive any notion of departing without leave. At every point of exit were posted confederates, who would unmercifully fire upon any one venturing to quit the theater.

At the close of this eloquent salutatory, Sonnino unrolled an [illegible]-looking sheet of paper [illegible] he gayly read off a number of names the bearers whereof were at that moment present at the theater and belonged to the most affluent families in the town. From every individual mentioned he demanded a certain sum of money which was to be immediately handed over. Each of the [illegible] parties was to be furnished with an armed escort to accompany him to his place of residence, there receive the stipulated tax, and return with him to the theater. About fifteen of Sonnino's associates hereupon left the stage and sought out the persons specified who arose and followed their guides without the least hesitation. Sonnino and half a dozen men remained on the platform. He kept his eagle eye sternly fixed upon the audience which did not trust itself to move. When all the contributions had been paid in Sonnino and his crew went forth from the theater and out of the town. No one thought for a moment of placing any obstacle in their way or departure.

But retribution could not be procrastinated [illegible]. This last outrage was [illegible] challenge. The Papal Government dispatched a battalion in pursuit of Sonnino. For a long time the crafty and audacious robber checkmated the troops. He harassed them with numberless feints, marches and counter marches. But they were constantly receiving reinforcements, and ultimately they pushed so close upon him that he was compelled to face them. He engaged them in several battles, in the last of which he suffered a crushing defeat.

Giacomo was severely wounded and captured. The best medical and surgical skill in the papal domains was brought into requisition [illegible] Forlimpopoli was howling frantically for vengeance. The public's demand for the grateful spectacle of a pompous execution had to be satisfied at any price. Sonnino's physical soundness was soon [illegible].

Sonnino's trial ended, of course, with his conviction, and the Pope, to whom the death sentence was presented for affirmation, did not feel himself moved to open his lips. "Non ha parlato!" (He has not spoken!") said the papal chamberlain to the minister of justice, as he returned the death-warrant. According to the existing custom, a criminal condemned to death was irrevocably lost if the Pontiff perused the sentence and judicial acts in silence. Should His holiness have merely inquired into some of the details of the case, should he have manifested his compassion only by an involuntary ejaculation of "Povero diavolo," the man was saved. At any rate his head again rested firmly on his shoulders and thereafter he had only the deprivation of his liberty to fear for.

At that time Gregory XVI. sat in the chair of St. Peter, and [illegible]'s lucky star ordained that Gregory should "shuffle off this mortal coil" just as the death warrant was traveling the tortuous road, so heavily clogged with tedious and complicated formalities from the papal cabinet to the authorities who were charged with the execution of the death-sentence.

Now it is an ancient usage that the death of a pope temporarily checks the procedures in judicial cases. Of course this is often very opportune for [illegible]. Pending the interregnum no death penalty may be consummated, and as a newly chosen pontiff rarely feels inclined to inaugurate his rule with the confirmation of death sentences the condemned being is generally saved. One of the first official acts of the new pope is to cause reports to be made to him of the unfinished judicial [illegible] and executed judicial decrees of the previous regime, and to take into consideration the pardon of convicts and condemned felons.

Thus Sonnino's case among others came before the cabinet of Pius IX., when the tiara had scarcely been placed upon this prelate's brow. Sonnino escaped death for Pius was [illegible] to the rule although the hero of Forlimpopoli had been painted to him as black as possible by the authorities. But he had escaped only the extreme penalty of the law and he was soon to discover that the pontifical clemency was not so good a thing after all. Pio Nono in this case brought into application that peculiar clause in the Roman penal code which clashes so harshly against the laws of common sense that one can only wonder in amaze who on earth the fellow was that originated the idea. This remarkable clause substitutes for capital punishment, in cases which call for consideration, a double or triple life-long imprisonment. According to ordinary conception one should think that a criminal would be adequately punished and rendered sufficiently innocuous to society at large by simply imprisonment for life. But Roman jurisprudence, unique in its way, intensifies this plain penalty by multiplying the period of incarceration for life by two and three. In reality this has the practical effect of depriving the convict of the faintest possible chance of future pardon. He who is sentenced to double or triple imprisonment for life is thus so indelibly marked for all time to come that it would never enter the head of any official personage to take a single step to obtain a mitigation of his punishment, be his reformation ever so radical and perfect. The name of the unfortunate is never [illegible] mentioned in the presence of the pope. It remains unspoken even when extraordinary events, like national jubilees or changes of government, give the impulse to universal [illegible] acts.

The sentence of death impending over Giacomo Sonnino was commuted to triple life-long imprisonment. He was transported to Forto Bano, a small fortress in the Romagna, situated in a marshy and exceedingly unhealthy district. Forto Bano kills its inmates by slow degrees. The garrison is changed twice annually to prevent its decimation by fever. It requires nerves of uncommon toughness to enable one to remain here five or six years without falling a victim to the malaria of the vicinity.

By interring Sonnino in Forto Bano the Papal Government seemed actuated by the motive to expedite with rare ease his congé to this life, probably in order to enable him to enter as quickly as possible upon the second installment of his sentence. According to all earthly probability, it would not take him long to make way with a single term of imprisonment for life in Forto Bano. Were the doctrines of euthanasia already known in Rome at that time? Not unlikely, for the followers of Ignatius de Loyola are a wise and learned sect.

But Sonnino had nerves of steel which not even the pestilential atmosphere of Forto Bano could weaken. He saw the garrison relieved twelve times, and his cheeks had not hollowed. He, fortunately, always had humane jailers who extended him their sympathy and permitted him to alleviate the tormenting tedium of the long and dreary days by work of a congenial nature. Sonnino, in his early youth, had been apprenticed to a sculptor. In Forto Bano he again took up his long neglected [illegible]. His [illegible] supplied him with marble which he chiseled into statuettes of the Madonna and the saints. These he gave to his kind guards, who naturally became very gracious unto him.

One day Sonnino's aged mother came to Forto Bano. She had thrown herself at the feet of Pius, who urbanely accorded her permission to visit her son.

When she beheld the statues which her son had [illegible] an idea struck her which seemed to her a revelation from above. She said to Sonnino, with kindling eyes:

"How would it be, Giacomo, if you essayed to construct a bust of his holiness? I would deliver it to him with my own hands, and he might be touched and pardon you."

Sonnino fairly snapped at the suggestion. Animated by his yearning for liberty he went at the work with fiery zeal. Ere twelve months had passed he had, after many a miscarried attempt, completed an admirable bust of the holy father in Rome. The countenance was so expressive of benignity that he would certainly be benign to Sonnino when Sonnino's sexagenarian mother delivered to him the flattering counterfeit presentment.

Sonnino found means to have the marble figure conveyed to his mother, and she was not dilatory in presenting herself to the Pope.

Pius gently raised her as she lay prostrate before him dissolved in tears, and supplicating for mercy to her son. He contemplated the piece of stone which represented him and it appeared to please him.

"I absolve your son," he said, mildly, "of one life term."

Sonnino, then, still had two life-long imprisonments to serve out.

The gray haired mother wandered afoot to Forto Bano. Pius had granted her permission to inform her son of his partial pardon.

Sonnino smiled bitterly when he received the intelligence. He merely said facetiously:

"Did I think that my representations might be [illegible] of any weight I would pray the holy father to allow this single term of which he releases me to be the first. For the remaining two I would be completely at his service. But I am afraid he would not appreciate the fitness of such an arrangement."

Sonnino's mother gave no heed to this bubble of levity and said:

"Suppose you continue to work, Giacomo, and not let your spirits droop. No tree is felled at one blow, and of Rome I believe it is said that it was not built in a day. We also know that the holy father manifests a lively interest for the immaculateness of Mary's conception, and it is whispered that he designs to promulgate the idea as a dogma at an early day. Make a statue which symbolizes the immaculate conception of our holy mother. Perhaps he will then grant you a full pardon."

And again went Sonnino to work. For a whole year he chiseled and hammered, and hammered and chiseled, indefatigably, sanguine and happy with hope. His mother took the Madonna sculpture to Rome. Here was just in full blast a grand jubilee instituted to impart eclat to the proclamation of the dogma of the immaculate conception. The trembling old woman cast herself at the feet of Pio Nono.

The august hierarch examined the statue attentively, and it seemed to yield him much gratification. He recalled to mind Sonnino's [illegible] and lent his ear very good naturedly to the agitated matron. Then again he struck off one term of incarceration for life. The loving mother went, with much lighter heart, though not wholly satisfied, on another jaunt to Forto Bano.

Sonnino listened to the tidings of the second installment of his pardon with the same smile with which he had received the first.

"Your case now stands materially improved!" said his mother consolingly. "You have but one more life imprisonment to serve."

"Cheery prospect, indeed," was Giacomo's dryly expressed opinion.

But now the fond parent was at a loss for further ideas. She determined to undertake a pilgrimage to Loretto. Perhaps there she might be inspired with some happy thought.

Weeks, months, years went by. During this time Sonnino was untiringly engaged in perfecting himself in his art. Had he been given his liberty he could easily have earned a comfortable subsistence as a sculptor. He would never again have had a tangible reason for molesting society at large. Often he indulged in time assuaging dreams on this subject. How nice such a quiet, peaceful life would be! But he did not allow himself to be [illegible] a life was [illegible] to be [illegible]. He [illegible] the much [illegible] charity of the holy father and saw [illegible] But the mother yet [illegible]. All her thoughts [illegible] that God might give her [illegible] ideas. With a fanaticism and [illegible] that were almost alarming, she brooded over plans [illegible] alas! burst like soap-bubbles, one after the other, and then vanished in thin air.

At that time affairs in Italy were taking a turn and assuming a shape that pretty clearly [illegible] on what a rotten foundation rested the chair of St. Peter. Piedmont was arming. After having just finished with Austria and Naples for a struggle with Rome. The Pope [illegible] his [illegible] and prepared to meet the [illegible]. He propped himself upon Lamoriciere, that gallant soldier whose sole [illegible] was his bigotry.

[illegible] In those days when the poor old [illegible] her way to her imprisoned son and said to him:

"I cannot live without you any longer, Giacomo. [illegible] I shall die content[illegible] ed. And I believe I shall yet see you without these walls. Listen, my son. I have had a miraculous dream. The Blessed Virgin appeared to me and pointed out to me the road to your liberty. O Giacomo! the goal is at hand, for the way is clear."

"Must I chisel another statue, mother?" asked Sonnino with a melancholy smile.

"Rail not, Giacomo! The statues bore good fruit. Without them you would now be pining away here in the uttermost hopelessness. They took away two thirds of your term of imprisonment. Obey me, and they will cancel the last and most important third."

"I am disposed to doubt, mother. The heart of the holy father is as stony as the marble from which I make my Madonnas."

"This time it will melt," cried the aged woman with prophetic enthusiasm. "Harken unto my dream! I beheld a group of statuary resembling that in which the knight of St. George slays the dragon. The dragon had a human head which bore the lineaments of the arch enemy of the Church and the holy father. It was the countenance of King Victor Emmanuel. And now the report is on the lips of everybody in Rome that His Holiness intends soon to excommunicate this royal heretic. And St. George had features that reminded me of a picture which is now sold at every street-corner in Rome. People say that it is the likeness of a great French general who is coming to succor the holy father. See! I have brought it with me, as well as a photograph of Victor Emmanuel. Giacomo, hew a group in marble just as I dreamed it, just as I have described it to you. It is my firm conviction that such a work would so move the heart of the holy father that he would give you full and unconditional liberty!"

Sonnino for the first time offered positive [illegible] ance. Sonnino revered Victor Emmanuel. To represent him as a vanquished dragon were a profanation in his eyes. No! he would not do this even if it led to liberty. But there stood the trembling, pale, beseeching matron whose hair was frosted with the snows of threescore and thirteen years—the poor, frail, dying mother who had said that she could not live apart and would not die in blessedness if her son were not her own again. Sonnino gazed long and earnestly into the quivering face that was raised in mute appeal to his, and finally said:

"Mother, you know not what you tempt me to do! But be it so! In you I love and honor a noble mother. Never in my life have I done aught that cost me such a struggle as the making of this resolve—the resolve to do that which you have suggested—that from which you expect weal but fills me with a presentiment of woe. However be it so. I have not the heart to say you nay."

And Sonnino went to work, and ere three months had passed, the emblematical group was finished.

The knight George bore the features of [illegible], the dragon those of Victor Emmanuel. The likeness of both was speaking and unmistakable. Esthetically and mechanically, the stone picture was almost perfection.

In silent ecstasy Sonnino's mother took possession of the statuary. She went to Rome. She arrived there in an auspicious hour. The Vatican was ablaze with pious excitement and religious enthusiasm. Everybody in court and military circles was solemnly swearing that Lamoriciere would sweep the Piedmontese from Roman soil in a jiffy. That assurance did not hinder the authorities, however, from secretly transferring prisoners from forts lying in an exposed position to safer quarters nearer the city. Thus Sonnino likewise after a fourteen years' abode in Forto Bano was removed to the little stronghold of Olizza, on the outskirts of Rome. He left Bano still possessed of excellent health and considerable physical strength. Its miasmal vapors had not affected his wonderful constitution in the least.

The old dame was accorded an audience with the Pope, and met with the same friendly reception as before. The holy father listened to her kindly and scrutinized Sonnino's work with much interest. The idea of a figurative representation of Lamoriciere as the conqueror of Victor Emmanuel evidently gave him keen pleasure.

"This Sonnino has conceits that are by no means bad!" he said on completing the inspection. "He takes good care that we do not forget him. I recollect his affair very well. Have I not already exempted him of two life-long imprisonments? Yes, yes, I remember now. And he has another life term to serve. He has been incarcerated as long as I have been Pope, that is to say fourteen years—a long time truly. Well then we shall again exercise mercy. Sonnino shall serve but two years more. In two years from to-day he shall be set free."

This certainly was not altogether what the old woman had anticipated, but still it was something. Why, coming to think about it, it was actually a great deal, for what were two short years compared to the original sentence of triple life-long imprisonment?

Sonnino, too, thought that two years under the circumstances were a mere bagatelle. He had expected no concession whatever. So when his trembling mother communicated to him the felicitous tidings, he exclaimed, in unfeigned astonishment:

"After all then, the man in Rome has a heart! From the drops of clemency he has hitherto sprinkled over me I would scarce have believed it."

From the moment in which Sonnino was apprised that he would yet hear the hour of his liberation strike, he was a transformed being. His apathy suddenly vanished. All his rest was gone. He moved about hurriedly in feverish excitement and appeared to have entirely forgotten to work. He never again touched a chisel. He ate little and that in haste, and spoke of naught but the hour when he should again breathe the pure sweet air of freedom. He made himself a calendar in which he marked off the two years which he still had to serve. After each day passed he placed a heavy stroke and in the evening he counted the days which were still before him. These he divided and subdivided into hours, minutes and seconds. The giant numbers surged wildly through his brain. He lost his sleep and a nervous irritability seized him. His fingers trembled and his knees quaked. Often he communed aloud with himself and for hours he was engaged in figuring on the wall. Finally he began to mark off every expired quarter of an hour.

In the meantime his cheeks were losing their roundness, his eyes were sinking in, his temples were hollowing and his frame became nigh unto a skeleton. What the murderous air of Fort Bano could not effect in fourteen years was brought about in as many months by the delirious thirst for freedom.

Now but a few more months were before him—then but a few more weeks, but the pardoned brigand glided through the galleries of Olizza like a spectre. Scarcely an ounce of muscle was remaining on his breast and not a suspicion of adipose on his whole body. He could grasp every rib, every sinew, every tendon. The eyes glimmered with an uncertain light; the haggard cheeks were at times suffused with a churchyard flush, the voice was hoarse and husky, the gait an unsteady totter. But the gaze of the man, who was riding madly and yet unconsciously unto his grave, remained immovably fixed upon the day which was to see him free.

At last he sent word unto his mother to come to Olizza on this red letter day to take him forth with her.

The mother came three days ere the appointed time. In her blinding bliss she perceived not the wretched condition of her son. Twice twenty-four hours passed, and then on the day before the day fixed for his liberation the lamp of Sonnino's life went out.

"To-morrow I shall be free," were his last words.

On the morrow he was free. The fever-press for liberty had released his soul from its terrestrial thraldom.

The old woman lifted the body of her son upon her shoulders and bore it from the fort into the open field. Here she scooped up some earth. To this crude sepulchre she consigned the cherished remains.

Then she cowered down beside the mound. Some people who happened to pass the succeeding day found a corpse recumbent on a new dug grave.—Appleton's Journal.
